UVTripPlanner Enhances its Free Online Tools,
Releases New 2010 UVTripPlanner Worldwide Edition at NBAA2009

Houston (Oct. 20, 2009) – Universal Weather and Aviation, Inc. announced that it has enhanced its free online airport/handler search and Great Circle route planner tool powered by UVTripPlannersm, the premier pre-flight trip reference tool for business aviation professionals. Attendees at NBAA2009 can visit Universal[®] Exhibit #5717 for a demo and also receive a complimentary copy of the new 2010 UVTripPlanner worldwide edition, available in print and CD-ROM.

“This is the same accurate and real-time data used by Universal’s award-winning Trip Support Services and is trusted and licensed by most major scheduling software companies. Operators can access this information absolutely free to help in their pre-trip planning,” said Randy Stephens, Senior Director, Specialty Products, Universal[®]. “For operators who want to access additional data online, including information on security threats, hotels, catering, transportation and more, UVTripPlanner has a comprehensive subscription-based version.”

Features of the enhanced free airport search and route planning tool include:

- Worldwide airport and FBO/handler search (includes contact information, hours of operation, airport diagram, fuel type, runway info, frequencies, FBO fuel brand and more)
- Request an on-demand custom UVair[®] fuel quote for any of the 2,000-plus UVair[®] card accepting locations worldwide
- Access METARs, TAFs, NOTAMs
- Great Circle route calculation plotted over current SIGWX, with arrival and departure airport and FBO/handler information included
- Integration of Aviation Weather Today’s 48-hour significant weather video forecast

UVTripPlanner 2010 Now Available

“We’ve updated both the print directory and CD-ROM with the latest airport, FBO, and handling information,” said Stephens. “Plus, with the print directory, operators get access to additional planning resources, including Universal’s popular pre-flight checklist.”
