Universal Aviation Ground Handling Facility in Paris Fully Restored

Houston (May 24, 2007) – Universal Aviation in Paris, a member of the UVglobal Network[®], has announced that as of May 1, less than four months after a fire that damaged its lobby and offices, it is fully restored. The announcement came almost exactly to the day of the one-year anniversary of the facility’s grand opening at Le Bourget Airport, which serves the greater Paris region.

“I would like to personally thank all of our clients who have shown such great commitment to the Paris team. I am thrilled to announce that the Universal Aviation facility in Paris is now 100 percent restored,” said Sandrine Jackson, Manager of Universal Aviation in Paris. “We were always operational, as the facility’s hangar was completely untouched, and employees continued to handle aircraft and perform day-to-day operations as normal. We were able to establish back-up services to accommodate the reconstruction, and therefore continued to provide the same quality services our clients expect. All trips were handled successfully over these past few months while we restored the lounges and certain offices in the facility.”

The facility includes specialized amenities for passengers and crew, including a hangar 50 meters wide by 60 meters deep, with 15-meter-high doors. It is the only private hangar in the Paris area that can accommodate two of the larger commercial-sized aircraft used for business aviation, available for use by monthly-based clients or overnight or flexible durations.

Other features include:

- VIP lounge for passengers
- Crew and drivers' lounges
- Conference room
- Business center
- Customs and immigration clearance at aircraft
- Discounted accommodation arrangements for crew
- Computerized flight planning, filing, and worldwide weather
- Security arrangement
- On-site gourmet catering
- Local dining recommendations
- Limousine and taxi arrangements
- Private car parking
- Complimentary wireless Internet access in all passenger and crew areas
