Meet the Inspiration: History-Making Pilot Barrington Irving Special Guest in Exhibit 7666, Tuesday, 1:30-3 p.m.

Captain Barrington Irving, who in June became the first African-American and youngest pilot to successfully fly around the world solo, will be available to meet clients and sign autographs Tuesday, Sept. 25 from 1:30-3 p.m.

“As a title sponsor of Barrington’s historic journey, we are thrilled to have him visit our exhibit to inform our clients about his journey and mission,” said Universal[®] Chairman Greg Evans. “We are honored to have supported Barrington in the achievement of his goal and he will surely serve as an inspiration to many people.”

Irving, a 23-year-old aviation student from Miami, is the founder of the non-profit organization, Experience Aviation, and the Experience Aviation Learning Center, which provides educational and hands-on training to middle and high school minority and inner-city students in many career fields in business aviation.

Barrington’s vision is that his journey will give hope for the future to underprivileged youth.

Press Conference Sept. 24 at 9 a.m.

Members of the media are invited to attend a Universal[®] Press Conference to learn more about these and other Universal[®] services on Monday, September 24, 2007 at 9 a.m. in Hall B Room 208 (B208).
